12. Educational aims of the programme

The aim of this course is to prepare students with the skills, knowledge, understanding of the UK theatre industries, and personal attitudes and abilities, and contacts with local, regional and national networks, to set themselves up as solo performers or small-scale touring theatre companies. The aim of establishing as a small scale touring company or practitioner does not however, limit ambition. Many successful mid and large scale companies started small. The skills and knowledge from the course are also very transferable to other theatre-related careers, in performing, writing, directing, producing, programming, technical theatre, and arts marketing and administration. The course would also provide a good basis to move into education as a career, and could lead to further doctoral study.

The title of the course MTheatre Touring Theatre indicates a field of practices and enquiries within the overall landscape of theatre today. This course asks questions about what it is that defines touring theatre, and how touring theatre can evolve to reflect and interact with changes in contemporary society. Touring theatre is a fluid and inclusive field, difficult to define perhaps but nevertheless the term 'touring theatre' is one that is widely used, and, on a day to day level, understood. The Arts Council, for example have a significant funding stream called Strategic Touring where they stress "forging stronger relationships between audiences, promoters, venues, artists and producers" and look particularly for work that "reflects the diversity of the local community and/or contemporary England".

The title MTheatre Touring Theatre is therefore:

- Firstly intended to signal a course in which the creation of performance work does not take place in isolation but in direct consideration of potential audiences, venues, communities and cultural contexts;

- Secondly, the title is intended to signal some of the practical 'business' involved in touring as an area of knowledge, skill and research i.e. how to make work that can tour, that is portable and adaptable, how to go about the business of organizing, funding, producing and promoting a tour etc. What kind of work is relevant to what kind of touring circuit?
- Thirdly the title 'touring theatre' is intended to signal the need to investigate, understand and potentially extend the possible forms of touring theatre and the opportunities and circuits for its production and presentation.

The distinctive features of the course that support this overarching aim are:

- Introduction to a broad knowledge and understanding of UK theatre, and a wide range of performance skills and techniques in the first two years of the course
- An individual learning plan, negotiated in a Level 6 Induction Intensive Away-Day, and supported in a structured way through Academic Tutoring at Level 6 and 7, which informs the delivery (through tailored specialist practitioner or lecturer input) of mandatory modules at Level 6 and 7.
- A final year focussed entirely on employability through the creation of 'real world' experience creating practical performance projects and delivering them within a range of public contexts, including an intensive production experience at a festival of national significance e.g. Edinburgh Fringe Festival
- Development of theatre industry business skills such as fundraising, marketing, organisational start-up and support
- A network of local and regional individuals, companies, organisations and venues to support the development and delivery of performance work, and facilitate students' entry into the professional world of theatre

The following are the aims for the course:

1. To provide students with a sound knowledge of the history, contexts and practices of touring theatre, within the wider field of theatre and performance in the UK
2. To support the development of advanced practical skills in a range of performance styles and practices
3. To enable students to plan and deliver the technical aspects of small scale touring productions using an appropriate level of theatre technology
4. To provide a detailed knowledge of the funding, business, marketing, administrative, legislative, organizational, ethical and health and safety processes integral to touring theatre
5. To give students an understanding of the range of systems and structures that support theatre, and touring theatre in particular, locally, regionally and nationally
6. To offer opportunities for students to gain direct work-based experience of preparing and delivering theatre and performance for a range of venues, communities and contexts
7. To enable students to become independent learners and researchers and to develop general critical, analytical and problem solving skills;
8. To enable students to bring an independent and professional level of commitment and engagement to their work
9. To support students in finding and developing their own distinctive individual or company performance style, and to identify where they, as solo performer or company, sit within the landscape of the UK theatre industries

Overview of the Course.

As the MTheatre Touring Theatre runs in parallel with the BA Drama & Performance, we are able to offer a wide range of shared modules at Level 4 and 5 which allow students to explore the breadth of the field of theatre and performance, before moving on to specialise in touring theatre at Level 6 and 7

Level 4

Level 4 teaching and learning introduces both skills and concepts that form the foundation of the course. Skills in devising and technical production are delivered within the mandatory module DRAM1200, whereas an investigation into the writing and performing of script based work is delivered in the mandatory module DRAM1201. A wide range of practical skills in performance are introduced at Level 4 through optional modules such as solo performance, group acting, singing, puppetry and mask work. Particularly relevant to students on MTheatre Touring Theatre are those modules which investigate approaches to, and contexts for, performance in public places or aimed at specific audiences: DRAM1302 Pop-up Performance in Public Places and DRAM1211 Theatre & Communities.

In addition, the Level Four mandatory modules aim at the provision of core student skills. DRAM1201 equips students with a basic range of academic reading and writing skills appropriate for analytic and critical approaches. DRAM1200 helps students develop a sense of group identity and collective responsibility in preparation for future collaborative work. It also enables students to develop principles of self and peer assessment.

Level 5

Level 5 offers a stronger focus on production work, informed by research, through the mandatory modules DRAM2200 and DRAM2201 which together form a major directed performance project, plus a choice from one of three modules as an additional mandatory: DRAM2202 Applied Theatre in a Range of Community Contexts, which explores the application of drama within various social and community contexts; DRAM2203, which focuses on 20th century plays and playwrights; or DRAM2204 which further develops devising skills towards public production. Optional modules at Level 5 offer students the opportunity to explore and develop additional skills such as choreography (DRAM2209), music theatre (DRAM2206), playwriting (DRAM2211) or scenography (DRAM2207). Other optional modules build on first year modules DRAM1302 and DRAM1211 to explore the application of performance within a variety of public or community contexts, such as DRAM2212 Theatre, Real Lives and History which applies drama techniques within museums and heritage sites to bring them to life. Particularly relevant for students on the MTheatre in Touring Theatre will be DRAM2301 Programming Touring Theatre which will support the students in understanding the organisational, marketing and programming aspects of professional touring theatre.

Level 6

Level 6 commences with an intensive Awayday in which individual learning contracts are developed with students on MTheatre Touring Theatre that will inform the skill development and input by lectures, practitioners and other professionals, as well as the independent learning of the student, throughout Level 6 and 7 mandatory modules. These learning plans will also be followed up within personal academic tutorials. Level 6 mandatory modules specialise further in touring theatre with opportunities to develop a production to tour to schools and colleges (DRAM3220) and to prepare a performance for a major festival (DRAM3304), to be realized at Level 7 (DRAM4300). Building on the level 4 and 5 opportunities for investigating the application of theatre within community contexts, DRAM3303 will develop research and plans for a substantial performance project with a chosen community, to be built on at Level 7 (DRAM4301). Further professional development, focussing on understanding funding, arts policies, marketing and business skills are enhanced in DRAM3216. Optional modules exclusively available to students on MTheatre Touring Theatre offer the possibility of specialising in solo performance (DRAM3301), or to work on workshop and facilitation skills (DRAM3302). Alongside these sit a range of further optional modules (shared with BA Drama & Performance) that allow students to continue to explore their individual interests. Throughout Level 6, there is a shift to increased independent learning and self-direction, with support and supervision from staff and professionals.

Level 7

Level 7 commences with a major, unique feature of the MTheatre Touring Theatre course: a three week intensive festival performance residency (DRAM4300) in August following the completion of Level 6 work. This builds directly on DRAM3304 and provides a unique work-based experience of both delivering a public production over a sustained period of time and engaging in the opportunities (for networking, viewing other work etc) provided by a nationally significant festival, such as Edinburgh Fringe Festival. Throughout Level 7 the emphasis is on the forming of theatre companies and/or development as a solo practitioner delivering projects in 'real world' contexts. Individuals and companies will be supported in finding their own distinctive style of work, as well as consolidating the necessary business and technical skills for their enterprises. Modules give opportunities for festival and small scale touring performance (DRAM4300), community-related projects (DRAM4301), and a more academically orientated Performance Lecture project, which opens up the possibility of Higher Education establishments as potential venues, as well as the opportunity to consider further practice based research within an academic context (eg PhD study). The course culminates with the independent creation of a major group or solo touring performance project, informed by all aspects of the course (DRAM4303). This project (and previous ones) aims to put students in a position to complete their studies with a readymade project for professional touring.

In order to prepare students for a working career in the theatre industries, some modules at Level 5 and 6, and most modules at Level 7 are substantially larger (in terms of credits) than the usual 15 credits. At Level 5 and 6 there are several 30 credit modules, delivered in one semester, allowing for the more intensive build-up needed to develop a theatre production. At Level 7, in order to allow for the unique learning opportunity provided in DRAM4300 Festival Performance: Production & Review, the academic year runs somewhat differently, starting in August and finishing in May. At Level 7, modules are staggered throughout the year rather than fitting in with the more usual semester format, allowing students the opportunity to focus more intensively on no more than two production projects at any one time. Again three out of the four modules are delivered as 30 credit modules in a more intensive format (i.e. within the equivalent of one semester), and the final project, DRAM4303, offers a substantial opportunity in a 45 credit module for students to develop their own independent production, demonstrating the culmination of their skills from the MTheatre Touring Theatre course and giving them a 'calling card' production to offer to touring theatre circuits after graduation.

Examples of learning, teaching and assessment methods used:

The course is taught through a blend of practical workshops, lectures, seminars, theatre visits and talks and performances by visiting companies, accompanied by independent research, learning and practical development and rehearsal. Blackboard is used to support all modules, and the department's technical facilities and the knowledge and skills of the technical support staff will be integral to students' learning. A key aspect of this course, as students enter Level 6 and 7, is the creation and presentation of public performances. These projects will be developed in connection, consultation or collaboration with a range of external organisations and venues, and provide significant work-based learning opportunities in the field of touring theatre.

The transferable skills of graduates in this domain are those much sought after in a range of other environments; they enhance students' profiles and employability and they are explicitly found in all work undertaken in drama. Thus the development of an appropriate work ethic, including taking on roles and responsibilities, collaboration, negotiation and decision making, leadership, interpersonal engagement and serving the whole are essential in any kind of production work, and this is embedded in the learning and teaching and assessment strategies employed by the department, and assessed within modules through attendance and engagement within course work.

14. Assessment Strategy

The assessment strategy is designed with reference to the University of Worcester Assessment Strategy (2015), the learning, teaching and assessment statement from the QAA Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement and the QAA Master's Degree Characteristics.

A mixed assessment strategy is designed to ensure the assessment of the various learning outcomes on the course, including practical work, written work, presentations, project proposals and portfolios as summative assessment items. Practical assessment is a significant feature of the course, as creative and practical skills are paramount to the subject matter. Whilst cognitive skills can be seen at work within practical assessments, written assignments are also deployed (such as essays or critical reviews) to encourage a strengthening of students' critical and analytical skills. Presentations allow for the development of vital communication and interpersonal skills, and project proposals engage students in 'real world' tasks in preparation for careers in the theatre industries. Portfolios assess a student's ability to gather, collate and utilize relevant research, or document and analyse practical development work. Formative assessments are used throughout the course either informally on a weekly basis through the presentation of and feedback on practical work, or through presentations or draft essays for peer or tutor feedback.

The assessment strategy also incorporates a gradual development from practical skills, knowledge and understanding in level 4, with these outcomes being further developed and complemented by skills of research and application in level 5. Level 6 modules build on these earlier outcomes and also require students to demonstrate more advanced practical, creative and work-based skills alongside analysis, evaluation and synthesis that are commonly most associated with level 6 study. Level 7 focuses on the advancement and synthesis of previous learning, the development of tailored independent learning and practice, and the application of these within substantial projects.

Assessment guidance and marking criteria is provided to students for each item of assessment. Each assessment item is specifically linked to the Learning Outcomes for the module contained with the module outline and is graded according to the relevant assessment criteria for each type of assessment (e.g. essay, practical, presentation).

Appropriate support in teaching, learning and assessment for students with disabilities is provided in conjunction with the University Disability & Dyslexia Service.
<http://www.worcester.ac.uk/student-services/disability-and-dyslexia.htm>

A grid showing assessment methods and weightings mapped to modules at each level, together with an assessment calendar of submission dates is included in the course handbook.

16. QAA and Professional Academic Standards and Quality

BA (Hons) Theatre (Exit Award only)

This award is located at Level 6 of the FHEQ. The 2015 QAA Honours Degree Subject Benchmark Statement: Dance, Drama and Performance articulates the knowledge, skills and categories of achievement to be expected of successful honours graduates in the field. These, together with the contextual statement have been used to craft course and module learning outcomes and content as well as learning, teaching and assessment strategies of all modules.

MTheatre Touring Theatre

This award is located at Level 7 of the FHEQ. In addition to the Subject Benchmark Statement: Drama, Dance and Performance, the 2015 QAA Master's Degree Characteristics has been used to craft course and module learning outcomes as well as learning, teaching and assessment strategies. The QAA Master's Degree Characteristics can be found here:

17. Support for students

Induction

Student transition into University life is assisted by an initial short, one week's induction programme which through a range of hands-on activities introduces students to each other, their course, the staff who will be teaching them and the Institute. Students are for example invited to attend the Institute of Humanities and Creative Arts (IHCA) Freshers' Party in induction week.

During this initial induction week and in the first Worcester Week students are involved in a range of activities which support them in developing an understanding of the expectations of their course, undergraduate study and the University's systems and services. They have talks or tours, for example, which introduce them to the Library and IT facilities, Media Services, the Careers and the Counselling Service.

Students are also provided with a brief induction into their second year. Direct entry students are also provided with a brief and informal induction. In addition the Institute for Humanities and Creative Arts monitors attendance closely in first year and provides support for first year students through the First Year Tutor system. This comprises dedicated members of staff who are available every day for drop-in sessions during the semester between 13:00 & 14:00. Online support is also provided through Twitter, Facebook and email.

The Personal Academic Tutor System at Level 4 and 5

All students are allocated a personal academic tutor who will advise them on issues related to their course throughout their study at the University and who monitors their progress. Personal academic tutor sessions usually take one of two forms: either one-to-one sessions where notes are taken and stored on SOLE, or group based sessions where general points and issues relating to the course are dealt with. Group academic tutorials are delivered within the mandatory modules at Level 4 four times during the year and students are invited to a one-to-one review following the completion of Semester 1 assessments, and towards the end of the second semester. At Level 5 students are invited to tutorials at least twice a semester, but academic tutors will welcome any requests for meetings in response to student need.

Level 6 and 7 Induction, Audit and Individual Learning Plan.

At the beginning of Level 6, which marks the shift to learning and assessment that directly contributes to the MTheatre Touring Theatre grade qualification, there will be an intensive Induction Awayday which will include an audit of individual and group skills. This audit will lead to an Individual Learning Plan, negotiated with each student, and the group as a whole, that will inform the detailed skill input (by lecturers/practitioners) on mandatory modules for the course at Level 6 and 7. This might include a re-visiting of skills taught at Level 4, such as puppetry, or the further development of ongoing skills such as acting or performance, or the refining of newer skills such as directing. The audit and Individual Learning Plan will also allow students to focus their interests and roles within performance companies, for example to engage more specifically in directing, technical theatre or scenography, or writing. In response to the Individual Learning Plan, specialist staff members or visiting practitioners deliver workshops or mentoring within the mandatory modules. The Individual Learning Plan will be revisited and updated through 3 additional meetings with the Personal Academic Tutor, and in collaboration with the Course Leader, at Level 6, and again at Level 7.

18. Admissions

Admissions policy

The course seeks to recruit students leaving School, Sixth Form College or FE College, also adults returning to education, and international students including those from the European Union and further afield. In line with the University's admissions policy Drama aims to provide fair and equal access to a university education to all those who have the potential to succeed or benefit from it. 19. Methods for evaluating and improving the quality and standards of teaching and learning

The course team is committed to a combination of formal and informal methods of Quality Assurance and Enhancement and operates within University and IHCA robust quality mechanisms.

The Annual Evaluation Report

The course team draws upon a range of evidence to reflect upon the quality and standards of the teaching and learning and to write an Annual Evaluation Report (AER). These include:

- External Examiner's reports
- Statistical indicators of student progression and achievement

- A range of indicators of student satisfaction including the NSS

Reflection upon this material enables the course team to produce an action plan for future enhancements to the course and student experience.

In writing the Annual Evaluation Report, the course team benefits from utilising feedback gathered throughout the academic year from students on their levels of satisfaction with their study experience and the extent to which their learning needs are being met. The mechanisms used for this include the following:

Module Evaluation

At any point during the module students have the opportunity to feedback to module tutors; all modules undertake informal mid-module evaluations. At the end of a module students are asked to complete the University of Worcester module evaluation form. This feedback is anonymous and is intended to give the tutors insight into how to develop and enhance the module.

External Examiners

External Examiners review samples from all modules at Level 5, 6, and 7, attend Exam Boards and provide detailed annual reports on the course. They are also engaged in advising on any major changes to the Course.

Course Reps

Course Reps are elected at each level of the course and are engaged in feeding back on the course informally and formally through Course Management Committees which meet twice a year.

Course Management Committee

Course Management Committees are comprised of Course Reps, Module Leaders, other staff members and library liaison representatives. There is a standard agenda which includes reports from Course Reps on student experience of the course.

Enhancement of Teaching and Learning in IHCA

The course team benefits from the culture of engagement around how to enhance teaching and learning within IHCA. Every course leader sits on the IHCA Learning and Teaching Committee; every subject leader and Head of Division sits on the Institute Quality Committee.

The course team participates in a range of Course, IHCA University and external activities aimed at enhancing the quality and standards of student learning these include:

- University Teaching and Learning Conferences and staff development workshops
- Undertaking a Post Graduate Teaching Qualification or HEA Fellowship application
- IHCA training for Hourly Paid Lecturers (HPLs)
- Peer Supported Review of Teaching
- Attendance and participation at Academic Conferences, HEA events
- An active research culture including seminars, symposiums and conferences held at the University

21. Indicators of quality and standards

Student satisfaction

As a new course, there is no direct data about the MTheatre Touring Theatre in terms of student satisfaction and feedback but the National Student Survey results indicate the current parallel course, BA Drama & Performance is well respected and increasingly so.

The overall satisfaction for the course on NSS was at 81% (83%) in 2015/16. The overall course satisfaction on University of Worcester's internal student survey was 90% and there was plenty of positive qualitative feedback from both surveys including:

'The help from tutors and technicians within the course is very good in terms of support and guidance, as well as recommending areas to look into during practicals and essays.'

'Across the three years, there was very little repetition as far as teaching goes, with a great amount of variety in module choice and topics that are generally explored in great depth.'

'I think I've just enjoyed it and all the lecturers have been really enthusiastic.'

'Confidence has increased and so have my interpersonal communication skills. I have found a career path through my course.'

External Examiner reports

External Examiners for BA Drama & Performance (2015/16) praise the way students at Worcester benefit from the strong integration of theory and practice and the way in which the students are supported to make their own practical investigations. They also state the ways in which students are given the opportunity to test out skills, knowledge and expertise in 'real' settings beyond the institution is a great strength and something that other institutions struggle to offer. This is an aspect that the new MTheatre Touring Theatre has been designed to build upon.

External Examiners' reports also state that they continue to be impressed by the high production values in the students' practical work that offers testament to the commitment to practical work from the Drama team and the strength of the support from the dedicated performance technicians, which again is an excellent indicator that the department has the appropriate skills and resources to support the very practically orientated MTheatre Touring Theatre.

Recruitment to the BA Drama & Performance course is strong, with the intake of Single Honours students over recent years falling generally between 40 and 60, and the intake of Joint Honours generally falling around 15 to 25. If this level of intake is sustained, it will make it easy to populate both the MTheatre Touring Theatre and BA Drama & Performance, particularly as modules are shared across Level 4 and 5.

Retention and progression rates remain high and stable within the BA Drama & Performance and student achievement is rising year on year with the percentage of 1st/2-1 degrees rising (again) in 2014-15 to 87.88% from 82.61% the previous year. A very impressive 6 first class degrees was partly accounted for by the high standard of practical work in the final Final Performance Project double module at level 6, again a good indicator for the direction of the new MTheatre Touring Theatre.

The majority of the staff have been and/or still are both academics and theatre practitioners, with ongoing companies and projects that students are regularly involved in. Additional hourly paid staff are employed for their specialist skills. All permanent teaching staff either have or are required to undertake a recognised teaching qualification. The department received 3 star and 2 star ratings in the recent REF.

22. Graduate destinations, employability and links with employers

Graduate destinations and employability

The MTheatre Touring Theatre is a unique course. No other University offers this combination of a 4 year Integrated Masters and the specific preparation for employment in the vibrant touring theatre sector. Graduates from the BA Drama & Performance, and the MA Drama have gone on to careers as solo performers, writers, directors and performers. Some have set up as independent practitioners or companies, but the feedback we have had from graduates (with whom we keep in touch) is that whilst these courses prepared them creatively for such employment they did not prepare them for the business side of running a small company. The MTheatre Touring Theatre aims to address this directly by combining the development of creativity, analysis, technical skills, and business and organisational know-how, alongside the ability to plan and take responsibility for ongoing learning and development within the professional theatre industries.

Through working in collaboration and consultation with practitioners, venues, companies and professional networks within the course, successful graduates will complete the course with a useful range of contacts for their entry into the professional world.

The structure of the course is designed to put graduates in the position of having a portfolio of performance projects ready at the culmination of their course so that they can set about entry into the theatre industries.
