Learning, teaching and assessment

The Learning, Teaching and Assessment strategy is designed to provide for a flexible delivery with a combination of part time evening teaching supported by technologically enhanced learning to enable students to complete the Programme alongside their work commitments. The strategy is predicated on a high degree of independent study, with the taught elements being designed to provide suitable levels of informed support.

The research methods component is designed to develop skills of advanced legal research which can then be utilised in the development of a dissertation that enables students to gain in depth knowledge and develop higher critical skills of reasoning and evaluation when exploring a specialist legal topic.

Teaching

Teaching is delivered through a combination of interactive workshops designed to develop skills of legal research and supervisory tutorials designed to support students through their research journey. These are delivered both on campus and online through the University Virtual Learning Environment.

Students are appointed a supervisor at the beginning of their studies who will provide ongoing support throughout both modules.

In addition to the formal scheduled delivery of the programme, students will have the opportunity to engage fully in the life of the School of Law including attending and participating in research seminars and conferences.

The University places emphasis on enabling students to develop the independent learning capabilities that will equip them for lifelong learning and future employment, as well as academic achievement. A mixture of independent study, teaching and academic support from Student Services and Library Services enables students to reflect on progress and build up a profile of skills, achievements and experiences that will help them to flourish and be successful.

Contact time

The total amount of study time on this course is calculated with reference to the module credit, meaning that 60 Credits equates to 600 hours of study time in total. By the very nature of this course, most of this time is taken up with independent self-study.

The Legal Research Methods Course includes 4 three hour interactive workshops and 6 one hour supervisory sessions. The workshops are taught over 4 weeks in the evening.

The Dissertation module includes 4 three hour workshops and 6 hours of scheduled supervisory sessions.

Supervisory can be delivered face to face at the School of Law or virtually at a distance.

Independent self-study

In addition to the contact time, students will undertake 564 hours of personal self-study over the year.

Independent learning is supported by a range of excellent learning facilities, including The Hive and library resources, the virtual learning environment, and extensive access electronic learning resources, including legal databases such as Westlaw and Lexis.

Teaching staff

Students will be taught by a teaching team whose expertise and knowledge are closely matched to the content of the modules on the course. The team includes solicitors, barristers and legal academics.

Teaching is informed by research and consultancy, and 85% of lecturers on the course have a higher education teaching qualification or are Fellows of the Higher Education Academy.

Assessment

The course provides opportunities to test understanding and learning informally through the completion of practice or 'formative' assignments. Each module has one formal or 'summative' assessment which is graded and counts towards the overall module grade.

As students on the Programme will already have completed 120 credits of post graduate study composed of structured taught learning opportunities, the 60 credits which make up the LLM Professional Practice (Top-Up) are devoted to the preparation for and the creation of a research project in the form of a dissertation. The assessment is divided between the plan for a dissertation in the Legal Research Methods module and the Dissertation itself. In most instances the Research Plan will be on the same research topic as the final dissertation, however students can undertake a different research topic if advised to do so by their supervisor.

Assessments include a 3000 word research proposal for the Research Methods module and a 10000 word dissertation for the Dissertation Module.

14. Assessment strategy

The assessment strategy is designed with reference to the University's Assessment Policy, the learning, teaching and assessment statement and the QAA Masters Degree Characteristics and the ongoing research into legal education including the Legal Education and Training Review.

At Masters Level, graduates are required to demonstrate lucidity and coherence in structured argument to defend their ideas and their process of realisation. Students will be required to read and research widely, reflect upon the material gathered and structure synthesised ideas into a critical, coherent argument, culminating in a practical conclusion.

The assessment methods include formative assessment to enable students to build on feedback in summative tasks. The assessments in the two modules are also constructively aligned with the Research Proposal in the Legal Research module being the Research Proposal for the final Dissertation.

Specific assessment and marking criteria, benchmarked to the University generic descriptors, are provided for each item of assessment.
